Rare House Plants

Foreword

On this, our 15th year, we take pleasure in dedicating this Catalog to the many Customers who have done so much to help us build Merry Gardens to its present size; to our photographer, Frank Claes, we give special praise and thanks for the many hours he has spent taking over 600 pictures of Merry Gardens plants during the past 10 years. His photographic work we consider the best and an integral part of our Catalog. What would a Catalog be without pictures! To our capable and loyal employees of the past, as well as of the present, without whose help we could not have grown so fast and to our future customers who have yet to "try" Merry Gardens plants.

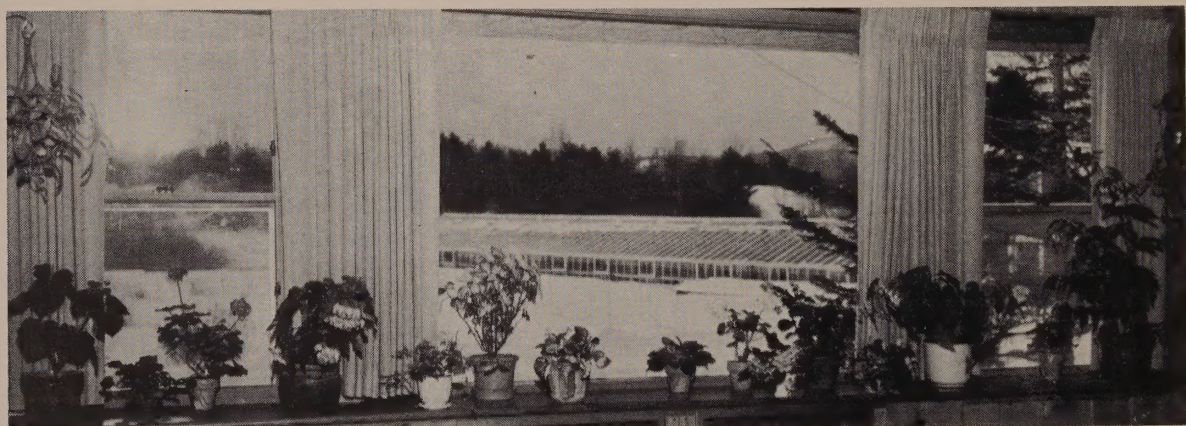

We now have 3 full time boys, 1 in the office and 2 in the greenhouses, with added help during our busier seasons. We enjoy rendering the services our Customers have learned to expect and receive and it pleases all of us to hear how the plants we grow and ship are received and flourish, whether the order is large or small. We also want to know about the plants that do not arrive well, as it is our aim to develop our packing and shipping methods to have each and every plant arrive in growing condition. A few of our plants are marked (†) to show they are difficult to ship due to their fragility or rareness and these are our "pet shipping problems" at the present. We enjoy the task of trying to protect these items for travel and never cease looking for newer packing ideas. We also aim for shipping only clean, healthy plants which is done by systematic use of the latest methods of pest controls, feeding program and utmost sanitation.

There are many fine books now offered on how to grow the plants we ship, but to assist you in their fundamental requirements, we are now including a "key to their culture." This is the same key used in Exotica, I & II, of which both editions are sold out. Exotica, III, is planned to be ready in the Spring of 1962. Many of Merry Gardens pictures are used in this most fabulous pictorial dictionary of Indoor Gardening. Our plants are listed as botanically correct as possible and for those who find the botanical name confusing, we have included the common name, when known, in parenthesis (). A careful check with Exotica, II, has found a few botanical names changed. The name previously used will, therefore, also be found in parenthesis () preceding the common name.

We try to answer all inquiries as soon as received. However, it would aid us greatly if when requesting information on plants, that a self-addressed envelope were enclosed with a question and answer form, leaving space for the answer after each question. When sending plant samples for identification, a sealed plastic bag keeps them much fresher.

We extend to all our most cordial invitation to visit us whenever you can. Due to the heavy shipping schedules on Monday and Friday mornings, we ask that you delay visiting us till the afternoon of those days, as it is difficult to give the Greenhouse Customer the time or service we like. We are open weekdays from 8:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M. and Saturdays from 8:00 A.M. until 12:00 noon. "Merry Gardening" to one and all!

Your Key to Care of Plants Indoors

The following is the same as the Key used in Exotica I and II.

The combinations of code letters and numerals following the listing of each genus indicate, in the sequence followed below, the general environment and growing conditions which it prefers or tolerates. Species which differ in their needs or tolerance are marked individually, showing only those letters or numbers in which they are an exception to the genus as a group.

TEMPERATURE IN FAHRENHEIT - Preferred Nighttime winter temperature. Daytime temperature can be 15° to 20° higher.

- C - Cool or cold: 40° - 45°. These plants are happier in a sun porch or greenhouse.
- I - Intermediate, or temperate: 50° - 55°. Most of this group tolerate house conditions.
- S - Stove, or warm: 62° - 65°. Most of these plants tolerate house conditions providing proper steps have been taken to raise the humidity which most of them also require.

LOCATION

- 1 - Tolerates the reduced light of the living room, office or dry heated apartment; Suitable for home and interior decoration.
- 2 - Wants fresh air to succeed and good light; such as window sill, glassed-in porch or a sheltered patio.
- 3 - Conservatory plant, needing humid greenhouse conditions not practical in the home except when proper humidity is provided with tray of water and pebbles, a glass terrarium or Wardian case.

SOIL

- L - Loam, clay or good garden soil, usually with decayed manure and up to 1/3 part peat or humus added. Where quick runoff is desirable, include coarse builders sand; plants like the desert type cacti, sand may be 1/3 to 1/2 of the loam mixture. Add agricultural lime to aggregate the clay particles in soil for good drainage and aeration, as well as to sweeten it.
- H - Soil rich in humus or organic matter such as leafmold; peatmoss is excellent for the root system, but needs addition of fertilizer, a little rough manure and a small amount of loam for structure should be included. Broken brick, charcoal, granite chips, perlite or coarse sand will improve drainage.
- O - Osmunda or Sphagnum moss added with lumps of charcoal and broken pots for drainage in the bottom of the pots.

LIGHT

- B - Bright light or full sun. Many plants which require sunlight for normal growth can be grown in the home at much lower light intensity with artificial light.
- F - Filtered or diffused sunlight. East window during summer is best, but a southern exposure must be lightly shaded from direct sun.
- N - No (direct) sun, - shady, or away from sun. Very few plants do not want at least some sunlight by preference. However, a great number of subjects tolerate a minimum amount.

MOISTURE

- D - Dry side: Allow plants to become moderately dry before watering. Watering means soaking thoroughly with tepid water. Cacti will stand dryness longer.
- M - Moist - Plants so marked, except when resting, should be kept evenly moist, but don't let soil become water soaked and sour.
- W - Wet - Never allow such plants to dry out. Keep in a saucer of water, emptying every day or two. They may resent standing continuously in water.
- (d) - Normally requires dormancy or rest period, during which little or no water is given, with temperatures reduced correspondingly.

Rosa (Miniature Roses) C-I2LBW

Miniature Roses can be grown in the home but require the maximum of care. Grown in a sunny (cool as possible) window. Keep a good rose spray handy and use every ten days. To provide adequate humidity, a plastic tent can be placed over them at night. They should be grown outdoors in the summer. A short dormant period is recommended in the fall when they should be kept very cool and allowed to lose their foliage, before bringing indoors. At this time, water sparingly watching for new bud growth of leaves, then grow as above.

Cacti and Succulents – I2LBD

Price 50 cents each, except as noted.

The term "Succulents" is used to identify a large group of plants which naturally grow in regions of little rainfall. They belong to many plant families and assume many odd shapes and forms, but they all have one characteristic in common — the ability to store water to tide them over dry periods. This makes them ideal as house plants in sunny windows as they can stand neglect. Although most types bloom and many are spectacular, they are used primarily for their decorative foliage.

Cacti are also succulents and usually referred to as those belonging to the family Cactaceae which are predominantly spiny in character.

Fibrous Rooted Begonias

The term Fibrous Begonia refers to the type of begonia that does not form a bulb or tuber. Since we carry very few tuberous begonias, they are included in this group. Tuberous begonias usually need a rest period and most are summer blooming only.

Fibrous begonias are the types grown for year round beauty as house plants and in greenhouses. A few require more humid conditions than most homes provide and a few such as the Calla Lily Begonia, are difficult to grow in too humid conditions. However, the majority of begonias are excellent plants for today's homes both for their pretty blooms and decorative foliage.

The following groupings are the methods used by most commercial growers to keep together the various forms of leaf and flower which are similar.
